ECS 452: Digital Communication Systems

Synopsis

The subject of digital communications involves the transmission of information in digital form from a source that generates the information to one or more destinations. This course extends the knowledge gained from ECS332 (Principles of Communications) and ECS315 (Probability and Random Processes). Basic principles that underlie the analysis and design of digital communication systems are covered. This semester, the main focus includes performance analysis (symbol error probability), optimal receivers, and limits (information theoretic quantities). These topics are challenging but the presented material are carefully selected to keep the difficulty level appropriate for undergraduate students.

➤ Violation may result in score deduction.

➤ Unless instructed otherwise, write down all the steps that you have done to obtain your answers.

○ When applying formula(s), state clearly which formula(s) you are applying before plugging-in numerical values.

○ You may not get any credit even when your final answer is correct without showing how you get your answer.

○ Formula(s) not discussed in class can be used. However, derivation must also be provided.

○ Exceptions:

○ Problems that are labeled with “ENRPr” (Explanation is not required for this problem.)

○ Parts that are labeled with “ENRPa” (Explanation is not required for this part.)

These problems/parts are graded solely on your answers. There is no partial credit and it is not necessary to write down your explanation. Usually, spaces (boxes or cells in a table or rows of dashes) will be provided for your answers. “WACSP” stands for “write your answer(s) in the corresponding space(s) provided”.

➤ The back of each page will not be graded; it can be used for calculations of problems or parts that do not require explanation (indicated by the label ENRPr or ENRPa).

➤ When not explicitly stated/defined, all notations and definitions follow ones given in lecture.

➤ Some points are reserved for accuracy of the answers and also for reducing answers into their simplest forms. Watch out for roundoff error. The error in your final answer should not exceed 0.1%.
